Tax Time Check-List

We recommend that you provide a copy of this check-list to your CPA so that they can better assist you.

Below is a list and description of the documents you or your CPA will need to prepare your taxes this year with respect to your CWM managed accounts.

IMPORTANT: Please keep in mind that CWM MUST receive all requests for tax documents no later than April 10th, 2019. Requests are processed in the order received and those received after the 10th of April, may not be completed by the April tax filing deadline.

☐ 1099-Composite (Non-Retirement Accounts)

Examples of non-retirement accounts:

- Individual Account
- Joint Account
- Trust Account
- Transfer on Death Account
- UTMA/UGMA Account
- Corporate/LLC/LP Accounts

The 1099-Composite includes dividends, interest, buys, sells (i.e. gain/loss schedule), and management fees for the year. As a result, this document is all that you or your CPA needs in order to report on your non-retirement investment accounts.

You will receive this document around mid-February from Schwab by mail or in electronic format and it will be available to you online at Schwab.com. If you do not remember your Schwab.com login, please contact Schwab directly at 800-515-2157 to retrieve this information (Schwab will not release your login information to CWM).

More often than not, a corrected 1099-Composite will be issued as late as the middle of March, so we strongly recommend that you DO NOT formally file your taxes before April 1st. (If a corrected 1099 is generated, this is not due to any action on the part of CWM or Schwab; rather, the various fund companies that produce 1099s dictate the changes and create the need to issue a corrected 1099.)

If you are working with one of our recommended CPA partners (below) they will already have access to your Schwab 1099 documents and there will be no need for you to bring additional copies with you to your meeting:

- Rick Foster of EFG CPAs, PLLC
- Brent Hagen of The Hagen Firm, PLLC

☐ Management Fees

Under the new tax code, "professional fees" such as attorney, CPA and advisory fees are no longer tax deductible.

☐ 1099-R (Retirement Accounts)

Examples of retirement accounts:

- IRA, Rollover IRA, SIMPLE IRA, SEP
- Roth IRA
- Individual 401(k)
- 401k, 403b, 457
- Defined Benefit Plan

1099-Rs are produced when a withdrawal is made from a retirement account. If you took money out of a retirement account in 2018, you or your CPA will need to account for it using the 1099-R.

You should have received your 1099-R around the end of January from Schwab by mail and it will be available to you online at Schwab.com. If you do not remember your Schwab.com login, please contact Schwab directly at 800-515-2157 (Schwab will not release your login information to CWM).

☐ Year-End Gain/Loss Report (Retirement Accounts)

You do not need this report to file your taxes.

Schwab sends out a Year-End Gain/Loss report for retirement accounts. The purpose for these reports is unclear since you are not taxed annually on any gains or losses in your IRAs or other retirement accounts, which grow tax-deferred. Keep in mind that you DO need to report any deposits or withdrawals made to your retirement account within the given tax year.

It is also important to note that the Year-End Gain/Loss report does NOT provide you with enough information to determine how your account actually performed, as it ONLY lists the realized gains and losses (i.e. positions that were bought and sold) that occurred during the 2018 tax year. What the gain/loss report does NOT include are any unrealized gains/losses (that is, gains or losses on positions that have yet to be sold), nor does it report any dividends or interest received. As a result, the report does not give you the full picture as to how your retirement account(s) actually performed.

Please refer to your CWM consolidated 2018 Year-End performance reports in order to review actual retirement account performance.

☐ 5498 (Retirement Accounts)

Examples of retirement accounts:

- IRA, Rollover IRA, SIMPLE IRA, SEP
- Roth IRA

5498s are produced when a contribution is made to a retirement account. If you made a contribution to a retirement account in 2018, then you or your CPA will need to account for it. There is one exception here; if you are putting money into a retirement plan such as a 401k or 403b through work, you do not need to account for it unless you are self-employed.

Since you have until April 15th (or later in some cases) to make a contribution to a retirement account for the prior year, 5498s are not mailed until the second week of May. As a result, it is very important that you know what your retirement account contributions were for 2018 when you or your CPA prepares your taxes. You can find this information by reviewing the "Transaction History" for your account on Schwab.com.

□ K-1s

K-1s are essentially gain/loss schedules for limited partnerships and member LLCs. Some of you will receive K-1s from investments made in companies that require K-1 reporting. If you receive a K-1, you or your CPA will need to account for them on IRS Form 990-T.

While you can receive K-1s for retirement accounts, most of the time you will not need to account for them on your tax return. The general rule is that unless Box 20 of the K-1 has Code 'V' and is greater than $1,000, you do not need to bother reporting them for a retirement account. For non-retirement accounts, you need to account for all K-1s regardless of what is in Box 20.

Unfortunately, K-1s do not have the same mailing deadline as 1099s. The K-1 mailing deadline is March 31st; many companies try to have them mailed no later than March 15th. Do not file your taxes until you are certain that you have received all K-1 documents.

If you are invested with any of the following companies below, and have not received your K-1 by March 31st, please contact us and we will help retrieve them for you.

- US Energy
- Mewbourne Oil
- Walton International
- Cynergy Emerging Growth Fund

If you are unsure about whether or not you will receive a K-1, please e-mail Info@CWMnw.com or call the office at 425-778-6160.
